

CONTRIBUTORS

THE CONTRIBUTORS

Dr. Théodore BOUABRE has doctoral degrees in English and Comparative Literature respectively from Charles de Gaulle University in Lille (France) and from Indiana University (USA). His dissertations are titled Good and Evil in the Novels of Anthony Burgess and Magical Realism in Novels of the Black World. Dr Bouabré's publications include : "La pauvreté chez George Orwell: un défi pour le socialisme » ; and « La religion dans Christmas Carol de Charles Dickens ». He worked as Assistant Instructor in the Department of Comparative Literature at Indiana University(USA) and Assistant Professor of English at Jackson State University in Jackson, MS (USA). Dr Bouabré currently teaches English at the Université Félix Houphouët-Boigny of Abidjan and at the International University of Grand-Bassam (Côte d'Ivoire).

Alassane Abdoulaye DIA is a PhD candidate in Comparative Literature (Concentration in African and African-American literatures) at Gaston Berger University at Saint Louis, Senegal. Mr. Dia has been lecturing at the English Department for about five years. He attended various international conferences both in Senegal and abroad. His publications appeared in international journals. His research interests include literary movements and traditions, comparative literature, African and African-American civilizations, folklore, intercultural dialogue.

Mamadou WATTARA holds a PhD in French Studies from the University of Colorado, Boulder, Colorado. He now teaches at Arapahoe Community College in Colorado. His research is in the areas of contemporary African and Haitian novels. His publications appeared in Nouvelles Etudes Francophones and the Journal of Haitian Studies, among others. He also contributed articles to edited books like Evil in Contemporary French and Francophone Literature in 2011 and Antillanité, Créolité, Littérature-Monde in 2013.

Dr. Constant KPAO SARE teaches in the Department of German Studies at the Abomey-Calavi University in Benin, West Africa. His research interests include migration, postcolonial studies, memory related to German colonization in Africa, among others. He is the author of Carl Peters et l'Afrique: Un mythe dans l'opinion publique, la littérature et la propagande politique en Allemagne (Hambourg, 2006) and Postkoloniale Erinnerungskultur in der zeitgenössischen deutschsprachigen Afrika-Literatur (Hambourg, 2012).